Kinmount Kountry Jamboree

Kinmount, located in the heart of Ontario, is proud to host its first Country Music Jamboree at the Fairgrounds. Kinmount is renowned for holding one of the top ten Fairs in Canada each year on Labour Day Weekend! With the construction of their new Arena just completed in 2008, the Board of Directors were looking for more ways to promote the grounds and the idea of holding a country music weekend was decided upon. The campground is quite beautiful and there is room for over 750 trailers.

Campers will have their own site nestled in a beautiful 200 - 300 year old white pine forest. Three trams will be operating throughout the camping area, during the day and evening, to bring fans to the Grandstand and Arena and transport them back to their trailers.

The main stage shows will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday evening at the Grandstand from 7:00 p.m. - 10:30 p.m.. As well as the grandstand seating, campers may bring their lawn chairs and set them in front of the stage to enjoy the show.

They will begin the Jamboree on Thursday evening, with 'Open Mic' in the newly constructed Arena from 7 p.m. - 11:00 p.m.. Open Mic will also be held each afternoon, Friday - Saturday & Sunday, from 1:00 - 5:00 and 11:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m.

To complete our weekend, there will be a fireworks display after the Sunday evening Main Stage show in celebration of Canada Day!

Misco Construction

Spotlight on Business

Misco Construction – Local Company built on solid bedrock

A family business serving Haliburton for over two decades

"Since we bought our cottage property in 1995, Misco Construction completed three projects ... the most important being the construction of our beautiful new cottage on Mountain Lake. Lavern and his capable crew worked on the job from demolition of the old cottage through to completion of the new residence. Lavern managed the project carefully, professionally and efficiently ... maintaining regular contact throughout. Lavern takes great pride in his work, evident in the high quality of the finished project. He has a reputation for going that extra mile to ensure that his clients get the best possible service." Ian and Ella Stewart.

Lavern Misco established Misco Construction back in 1987. When he decided to start his own construction company Lavern had management.

Born and raised in the Highlands, Lavern has developed an instinctive and thorough knowledge of local climate and soil conditions. That insight gives Misco Construction a special perspective. Building in the Highlands, on the hard bedrock of the Canadian Shield, is demanding. It's a place where every job brings special challenges.

In 40-plus years of building in and around the Highlands Lavern has garnered a literal treasure trove of expertise in local project management conditions, knowledge that he brings on site to every Misco Construction project.

Lavern is understandably proud of this family business. When he started Misco Construction, his wife Marion handled the firm's bookkeeping, payroll, and scheduling chores, in addition to most of the other office duties.

A lot has changed in those twenty years, but Misco Construction remains a well-established and structured presence here in the Highlands. And the family influence is still there at its core. Twenty years ago, Lavern's and Marion's son Chris decided to take a year off before university to work with his dad. He fell in love with the business and has been working alongside Levern ever since.

Chris brings his own deep well of experience to every Misco Construction jobsite. He learned the ins and outs of the trade from his father, from foundations, to framing, to the fine detail of interior finishing.

Chris now works as the firm's "hands-on" project supervisor and manager. He is the man to see for all of your project needs, from pre-design planning, to consultation and total project oversight.

They work very closely with all of their sub-contractors, and a lot of them have also been involved with Misco Construction for well over a decade, collaborating on building projects, including a vast array of homes and cottages. Levern's son-in law is a licensed local plumbing contractor who brings a decade of experience to the job site, and another cousin is involved in septic placement and excavation. They also have their own licensed electrician on staff. With Misco Construction you get a trusted builder and a strong local team of support contractors on every job site.

"No other tradesmen are needed," says Levern. "We do it all." No overstatement there.

Misco Construction caters to all of your particular building needs from complete homes, cottages and additions to renovations, foundations, decks and garage additions. They can also renovate existing foundations, build outside walkways, and perform a myriad of other renovation projects. "No job is too small," says Levern.

A Bit About Millinery

Millinery refers to hats and other clothing sold by a milliner to women, men and children or the profession or business of designing, making, or selling hats, dresses, and hat trim to clients. Women would ask a milliner to remake their old clothing into new clothing.

Historically, milliners, typically female shopkeepers, produced or imported for sale an inventory of garments for both men and women, including hats, shirts, cloaks, shifts, caps, and neckerchiefs. Customers would visit a millinery shop to examine and buy clothes (children's clothing, shirts, undergarments and caps, for example).

More recently, a milliner has become a hatter who designs, makes, sells or trims hats primarily for a female clientele.

The origin of the name is likely the Middle English Milener, as in an inhabitant of Milan or one who deals in items from Milan.

Women's fascinators are a style of millinery: the use of feathers, materials, beads, pearls and crystals to make extravagant to petite fascinators for brides, weddings, christenings, ladies day at the horse races and many other glamorous occasions.

Trapped like a rat

Danny Elliott, 43 of Niceville, Florida, tried to rob a Montgomery, Alabama bank. His getaway didn't go as smoothly as he had anticipated. The teller he had just robbed waited for him to enter the double-doored foyer, then pushed a button that locked both sets of doors.

"He was trapped and never showed a gun," said police detective Shawn Smith.

The great escape

One of our readers, a former corrections officer, told us about a couple of inmates who tried to escape from their medium security prison. They made a rope out of bedsheets and used it to scale a wall and climb down the other side. Unfortunately for them, the other side of the wall was still inside the prison grounds. They were promptly apprehended.

Polite robbers wait their turn

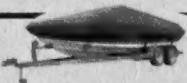

Two Birmingham, Alabama teens walked into a shoe store and asked employee Sonya Graham for a pen and paper. One of the girls wrote a note, then handed it to the worker, saying, "I'm sorry to do this. You're so nice."

The note said: "I have a gun in my pants, give me all the money."

"You came at a bad time," the employee said. "I have a customer to wait on."

The would-be robbers offered to wait, police said, so the worker walked to the back of the store and triggered the store's silent alarm system. She then went back to the counter and stalled the suspects until police arrived.

"They were real nice," said police Lt. Roy Williams, adding that the girls were armed with a toy cap pistol. "They probably haven't done this before."

The Dangerous and Elusive Mountain Lion

Felis concolor (mountain lion) is one of the most elusive carnivores in North America — and one of the most dangerous.

The famous R.D. Lawrence decided to spend 10 months in the heart of the Selkirk Mountains in an isolated area where for hours, man and mountain lion perched warily in trees watching each other. This incredible story returns to print with the launch of a new edition tentatively scheduled for July 3. Come out for this opening reception on the same day from 1 – 4 p.m. The cost is $5 per person.

The Ontario Puma Foundation will also be making a presentation during the launch. For more details call the Agnes Jamieson Gallery at 705 286-3763.

The Dorset Scenic Lookout Tower, Kiosk and Picnic Site

A Must-Visit For Visitors and Residents

by George Farrell

Question: What does Dorset have in common with New York City, Paris and Toronto?

Answer: They each feature high structures with spectacular lookouts, which most residents have never visited.

What is it about people who live in the shadows of high structures, yet never venture the heights, for that breathtaking view? Maybe its complacency, maybe it's a fear of heights (acrophobia) or maybe it's just a case of "I'll do it someday." Well, as the saying goes, "there's no time like the present." And the present would be an excellent time to check out everything at the Dorset Tower, before the mad rush of tourists descend, and then ascend, to experience the autumnal riot of colour, provided by expiring maple leaves.

So, if you're looking to get out of the house and do something different with the family, the Dorset Scenic Lookout Tower, Kiosk and Picnic Site might be the ideal destination. Don't like heights? Not to worry, because at the site, as the name implies, there's plenty of picnic tables from which to gobble up that fabulous lunch, and there's the Kiosk that features many unique gifts, and items from around our county. Of course if you enjoy a bit of a thrill there's the climb up the tower itself, with its eye-candy reward for your breathlessness. If you prefer to stay on terra firma, there are still spectacular views from safe vantage points on the ground, and the trails through the woods are also very pleasant. So there really is something for everyone to do and see.

Since 2001 Barb Kostenuk has been the site coordinator, and she gave me an abbreviated latter day history. "In the 90's Premier Harris was going to close down the Tower as part of cost-cutting measures. The alternative was for the Township, then called Sherborne et al, (now Algonquin Highlands), to take over the property and maintain it. Instead of transferring those costs onto a relatively small tax base, it was decided to try to make the park self-sufficient, by charging a per-vehicle fee." The toll for individual vehicles to visit the Tower site is $4. A seasonal pass costs a very reasonable $15. "The fee goes to cover continuing maintenance and it also helped with the initial expenses and repairs to the tower and the grounds, including new barriers and safety walks around the perimeter. Then Eco Log Homes, part of the Haliburton Forest Wildlife Reserve, donated the big, squared hemlock timbers, which went to build the Kiosk. They supervised the construction as well, and our really nice log building was opened in August of 1999."

Many people know of the Dorset Tower and the fact that you can have a picnic there, but some people aren't as aware of the Kiosk, and what it contains. "The Kiosk acts as a tourist information centre for the Haliburton and the Muskoka regions," Barb explains. "We have maps, accommodation

On one of the inside walls of the Kiosk hangs a world map, festooned with push-pins to indicate all the countries where visitors have come from. "We've been able to talk to people from New Zealand to Cape Town, and from Iceland to the Far East," Barb Kostenuk exclaims. "In fact from every continent except Antarctica."

Some Tower Trivia:

The original land for the tower and the trail to it was purchased in 1922 for $25.

The original fire lookout tower, built in 1922 was 25 meters, (82 feet) high.

The current scenic lookout tower, built in 1967, is 30 meters (100 feet) high

The observation deck is 142 meters, (465 feet) above Lake of Bays.

Without binoculars, over 800 square kilometers (310 square miles) can be seen from the deck.

On opening weekend (Sept 14, 1967) more than 8000 people climbed the 128 steps to the top of the tower.

Annually, 60,000 vehicles pass through the gates.

In the peak Autumn season more than 630 vehicles, including 4-6 tour busses, can visit the Tower in a single day.

A History of the Games

In 1988, a large group of residents of Haliburton County began discussing the feasibility of holding an annual Highland Games in Haliburton County. The area had a strong Celtic background and a local population interested in the Celtic Arts. It already supported a Pipe Band, and had its own registered tartan, which was worn by the band and by many local residents.

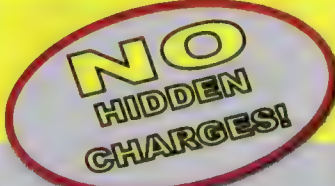

Scottish dancing lessons were being held in both country and highland dancing for adults and children, and social events throughout the year were held with a Scottish or Celtic theme. A board was formed and support was sought from local service organizations and local government.

First Board Members Chair Joan Irish, Andy Campbell, Drew Carey, Earl Cooper, Don Johnston, John Mateer, Shirley Rapson, Lyn Stevens, Lewis Stevens.

In 1989 the first Haliburton Highland Games were held in Glebe Park, Haliburton Village, and were a huge success. Haliburton Village had been chosen because of the park facilities, easy access to the large cottage communities of Haliburton, Muskoka, and the Kawarthas, local support for the games, and being the home of the Pipe Band.

In 1997 the Games were moved to Head Lake Park, Haliburton Village. This is the present home of the Games, a lovely setting beside Head Lake, in the heart of the village surrounded by rolling hills.

In 2001 the Games incorporated and the first draw for a Trip to Scotland was held.

Crime Flashback

by Max Haines

Miss

Marie Wendel figured she knew Father Patrick Heslin better than anyone else on the planet. After all, she had been the good father's housekeeper for more than seven years.

That's why she was so puzzled when he didn't let her know he had been delayed.

Marie was beside herself. Earlier, on that nasty summer evening of 1921, she had answered the bell at the parochial residence of the Holy Angels Church to be greeted by a gruff man, who said to her, "I would like to see the Father. My friend is dying. I want to see the Father at once."

Father Heslin came out of his study and had a hurried conversation with the stranger. He put on his overcoat and shouted to Marie, "I will be back as soon as possible." Together with the stranger, he sped away through the streets of Colma, a San Francisco suburb.

By 2 a.m. Marie had trouble sleeping. It was true, she thought, Father Heslin had often stayed overnight at a dying parishioner's bedside, but he always managed to phone. Eventually, Marie fell asleep. In the morning, when she discovered Father Heslin hadn't returned, she notified Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, informing him of the incident of the previous night.

The archbishop was pondering what to do when he received a special delivery letter. It was a ransom letter demanding $6,500 for the return of Father Heslin. There was no doubt as to the letter's authenticity, as only Marie, the archbishop and the bona-fide kidnapper knew that a kidnapping had taken place. The archbishop called the San Francisco Police Department.

The lengthy ransom demand, in essence, informed the archbishop that Father Heslin was securely chained in a cellar. Beside him was a candle which, when lit, would burn for two hours. Chemicals had been placed at the base of the candle. When the candle's flame ignited the chemicals, poison gas would be released, which would kill the priest. Should the kidnapper be detained in his effort to pick up the ransom, Father Heslin would die.

The kidnapper went on to say he had killed many men in the First World War and had no hesitation in taking the life of a priest. He gave instructions as to how the $6,500 was to be transferred. He demanded that one person drive to a specified lonely road.

When the driver came to a white marker beside the road, he was to stop and get out of the car. A string would lead from the marker into a field.

At the end of the string the intermediary was to leave the ransom. The note also warned if the kidnapper was suspicious of anything, he would not return to the cellar, spelling Heslin's doom. Further instructions would follow.

Despite the dire warnings, police scoured the area looking for houses with cellars. Citizens held a rally and collected $5,000, which was added to an official reward of $6,000 already being offered for the return of Father Heslin.

Huge search parties were formed. The area in and around San Francisco was searched for the missing priest.

On a quiet news day in August, Johnny O'Brien, a writer for the San Francisco Examiner was visiting Archbishop Hanna to do a routine follow-up story on the kidnapping. While he was there, the archbishop received another visitor, who introduced himself as William A. Hightower.

Hightower was a 43-year-old former Texan, who followed the noble profession of baker. He related to the reporter and the archbishop that a hooker, Dolly Mason, told him a client of hers had told her he had buried something of value in the sands of Salada Beach. The article of value was guarded by a man who was constantly frying up a batch of pancakes.

Ears perked up. Everyone in the room, if not the entire city, knew of the Albers Milling Co.'s billboard, which featured a miner flipping flapjacks over a desert fire. Hightower believed the priest's body lay near that billboard.

And on what did he base that belief? Well, he couldn't be sure, but he had gone down there and had found a black scarf in the sand, which he had left as a marker before calling on the archbishop.

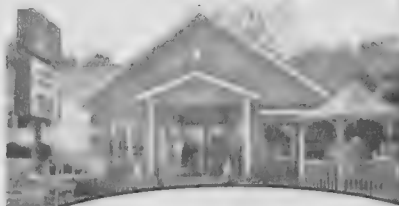

As quick as a flash, O'Brien had a car full of police, shovels and Hightower beating a path to the billboard. Sure enough, Hightower found the scarf. Within minutes, the assorted men discovered the body of Father Patrick Heslin.

On the return trip to the city, Hightower was in good spirits. Visions of reward money, which exceeded the ransom demand, danced through his head. He was talkative and revealed that his hooker friend Dolly hadn't been having much luck in her chosen profession. One day she mentioned to him that one of her tricks had had a bit too much to drink.

Dolly noticed he was wearing a revolver. When she commented that guns made her nervous, he replied, "Well, you might dam well be scared of this one. It's killed a man."

Her client talked about hiding something valuable near a man flipping pancakes.

When Dolly heard that her customer was a bootlegger, she thought that a large cache of liquor might be buried. She told Hightower.

He would go down there and if he found anything, they would split the proceeds.

Hightower went to the beach, found the scarf and, as they say, the rest is history. The only thing left was to collect that reward money.

An autopsy revealed the back of Father Heslin's skull had been crushed with a blunt instrument. He had been shot twice, in the back and thigh.

Police checked out William Hightower. In his room they found an interesting gadget. Ten short iron pipes were embedded in plaster of Paris. Each pipe was loaded with a shotgun shell. Nails, designed as firing pins, were attached to springs. Pressure on a trigger would discharge the homemade machine gun.

When told that the police had discovered his machine gun, Hightower blushed sheepishly and admitted he often made useful gadgets at home. That didn't mean he had murdered anyone. Even when a piece of string found near the body was matched to string found in Hightower's room, the suspect declared the same type of common string could be found in most homes. Police were unable to locate Dolly Mason, but Hightower wasn't dismayed. He pointed out that, in her line of work, she often moved from city to city.

Hightower would only say that he had been out driving with his girlfriend, one Doris Shirley, at the time of the disappearance and so could not be Father Heslin's abductor. Initially, Doris could not be located. Police were surprised when Miss Shirley pranced into police headquarters, with her fiancé in tow. She admitted she and Hightower had been on intimate terms some time earlier. However, on the night in question, she had taken in a play, returning to the room she had occupied with Hightower at 11 p.m. He had arrived minutes later.

No, she had never heard of Dolly Mason or a cache of booze. In fact, no one had ever met Dolly, for the good reason that she didn't exist.

When Marie Wendel positively identified Hightower as the man who had sped away with Father Heslin on the night he had disappeared, the jig was up. Hightower was charged with murder.

At Hightower's trial, the only bone of contention was the sentence -- life in prison or execution. He was found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment.

For years, Hightower worked at his trade as a baker in San Quentin Prison. He never discussed his crime and became something of an author while incarcerated. The man, whom some people believe killed a priest, not for the ransom but for the reward, published a humorous pamphlet called Observations From A. Hightower. Evidently he dropped William for the sake of the pun.

After spending 53 years in prison, William A. Hightower was released on May 30, 1974. He was 94 years old.

Fun Family Restaurant Provides Food, Entertainment and an Enjoyable Environment

By Mark Arike

For a second summer in a row, BAMS in Fort Irwin is back. But this season there's even more for families and adults to look forward to at the fun restaurant and colourful hangout spot.

The owners of BAMS Bistro Inc., Barbara Jenne and her husband Steve, first opened up their establishment last Canada Day to a terrific and responsive flow of tourists and locals.

"Everyone loved it, we had such a positive response" says Barbara, who points out that each letter in BAMS represents the name of a family member (Barbara, Amy, Molly, Steve). A visually enticing bear depicted with its paw holding a savoury ice cream cone graces the BAMS business logo that was designed by a family friend/graphic designer.

The Jenne family has been cottaging on Haliburton Lake for the past 12 years and they live full-time in Barrie, where Barbara and Steve run their own marketing company.

Before the couple took over the building last summer, it housed a Mexican food restaurant, and prior to that, was a grocery store.

Barbara says that she found Fort Irwin was in need of a place that would add some incentive for more people to visit the area, which is just a few kilometers past Eagle Lake.

"I just found that we should create a place that would provide fresh food and a fun atmosphere," she says. "When cottaging as a kid I remember going to a local business that had pinball machines, burgers and pizza slices. Going to a fun and friendly hangout like that brings back some good memories."

The entire Jenne family is excited to announce the many new attractions that are a part of BAMS this summer. The outdoor patio is now fully licensed for those 19 and older, a 12-hole mini-putt golf course has been installed by Steve and a helper, there will be three new pinball machines, the menu has some new items, there's an enhanced wine list, a pizza club card, mid-week specials and gift certificates for purchase.

At BAMS you'll find that the food isn't deep fried; here it's all freshly baked.

"We don't deep fry anything, explains Barbara, "we don't serve fries, we serve kettle chips with our sandwiches. Our chicken wings are also baked."

The pizza menu is quite extensive at

You can eat in or take-out, and cash is the only acceptable form of payment.

The Jenne family would like to thank everyone who has supported their business, including local businesses in Fort Irwin.

Next weekend, Sat. June 27, 2009 the Gooderham Volunteer Fire Fighters Association (out of Station 3, Highlands East), is holding a fundraising BBQ in the Gooderham LCBO parking lot from 11am - 5pm.

They will be cooking up delicious sausages and their spicy hot "Backdraft Burger" which has been described by previous supporters as "the best roadside burger ever". To experience that burger alone is worth the trip over.

The Gooderham Volunteer Firefighters Association are trying to raise money to purchase the Jaws of Life extrication equipment.

Along with their fundraising BBQ, they are also selling raffle tickets for a BBQ package valued at $1500.00, which includes a BBQ (valued at $650.00), a cedar picnic table and two Muskoka chairs built by the firemen, cooler, BBQ utensils, two folding chairs, and much more.

They will also have a set of the Jaws of Life extrication tools on display for everyone to see what it is they are working towards purchasing.

The Gooderham LCBO is also doing a bottle drive to help them raise enough money.

Bounce This Along...

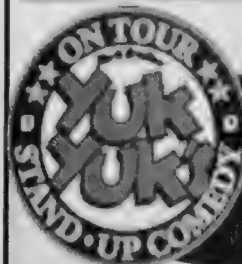

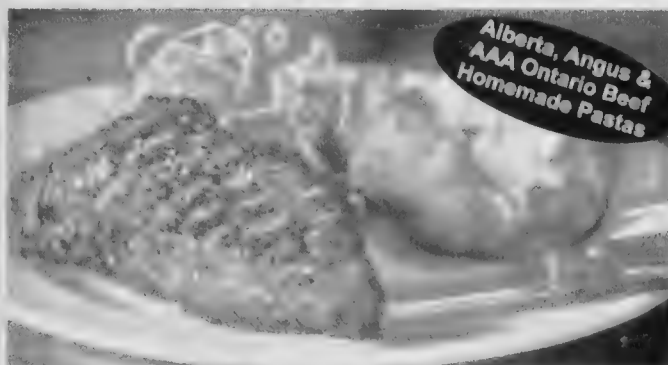

All this time you've just been putting Bounce in the dryer! There's more to that little sheet then meets the eye.....

1. It will chase ants away when you lay a sheet near them. It also repels mice
2. Spread sheets around foundation areas, or in trailers, or cars that are sitting and it keeps mice from entering your vehicle.
3. It takes the odor out of books and photo albums that don't get opened too often.
4. It repels mosquitoes. Tie a sheet of Bounce through a belt loop when outdoors during mosquito season.
5. Eliminate static electricity from your television (or computer) screen.
6. Since Bounce is designed to help eliminate static cling, wipe your television screen with a used sheet of Bounce to keep dust from resettling.
7. Dissolve soap scum from shower doors. Clean with a sheet of Bounce.
8. To freshen the air in your home - Place an individual sheet of Bounce in a drawer or hang in the closet.
9. Put Bounce sheet in vacuum cleaner.
10. Prevent thread from tangling. Run a threaded needle through a sheet of Bounce before beginning to sew.
11. Prevent musty suitcases. Place an individual sheet of Bounce inside empty luggage before storing.
12. To freshen the air in your car - Place a sheet of Bounce under the front seat.
13. Clean baked-on foods from a cooking pan. Put a sheet in a pan, fill with water, let sit overnight, and sponge clean. The anti-static agent apparently weakens the bond between the food and the pan.
14. Eliminate odors in wastebaskets. Place a sheet of Bounce at the bottom of the wastebasket.
15. Collect cat hair. Rubbing the area with a sheet of Bounce will magnetically attract all the loose hairs.

16. Eliminate static electricity from Venetian blinds. Wipe the blinds with a sheet of Bounce to prevent dust from resettling.
17. Wipe up sawdust from drilling or sand papering. A used sheet of Bounce will collect sawdust like a tack cloth.
18. Eliminate odors in dirty laundry. Place an individual sheet of Bounce at the bottom of a laundry bag or hamper.
19. Deodorize shoes or sneakers. Place a sheet of Bounce in your shoes or sneakers overnight.
20. Golfers put a Bounce sheet in their back pocket to keep the bees away.
21. Place several sheets of Bounce in a tent before folding and storing them. It will keep them smelling fresh.

Have you ever wanted to play in a band or just jam music with friends? Your chance to do so is coming up in July.

This Jammin' the Blues Summer Music Workshop with Clark Guettel is back at the West Guilford Community Centre by popular demand from Monday, July 20 – Friday, July 24. This is a music program developed for both the novice and experienced musician. Starting with a blues format, you will learn the basics of improvisation as well as combo arrangements geared to your level of experience.

Improvising music is the spontaneous creation of melody based on chord and rhythm structure. You don't have to be able to read music. This program is based on chord theory and by playing by ear.

After covering some basic fundamentals, the main focus of the week will be jammin' as a band, collaborating to develop those cool grooves and hot chops. You will be introduced to a variety of styles including roots blues, R&B, funk, reggae, country, folk, world, Latin and jazz.

It doesn't matter what kind of instrument you carry. Examples include the electric or acoustic guitar, bass, keyboard, saxophone, trumpet, trombone, drums, percussion, banjo, violin, mandolin, harmonica, vocals, etc.

You will benefit from the individual attention as well as the group experience. A basic knowledge of your instrument is necessary. This is an adult program and teens are welcome.

Bring your own instrument and a swimsuit – there is a beach just across the road.

Hours of the program are Monday to Friday from 9 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. The fee is $230. A P.A. and digital recording equipment will be provided to record the jammin' sessions.

Hurry and register because spaces are filling up quickly! Call Clark at 613 625-2946 or email clguettel@webhart.net.

Howl with the Wolves

Experience the Haliburton Forest
Like You Never Have Before

Every Thursday evening in July and August, Haliburton Forest offers a public wolf howl. Starting at 8 p.m. and taking place at the Base Camp, visitors gather at the seminar building to hear a presentation on wolves, their ecology and relationship to humans.

After the presentation, the group is taken for a short hike where an interpreter will attempt to "howl up" the resident pack. Though there is no guarantee that you'll get a response, there is a good track record in this forest!

This event offers another great family outing at Haliburton Forest. Pre-registration is not required and payment is by donation.

For more information call 705 754-2198 or email info@haliburton-forest.com.

White Trail

by Marci Mandel

"Happy Juice"

From May 2005 to April 2007 I wrote a column in this paper. At first it was titled Trundling Along the White Trail, then it became Scampering Along..., and then finally it was Dancing Along.... Three years of personal essays, I thought, was enough but apparently not. There's a longing for reflective writing, both in me and the readership, so I am picking up where I left off, as best as I can.

The next transformation, I had predicted, was to be Flying Along the White Trail because it implied an achieved sense of freedom. But I didn't feel quite there yet. Then last week, completely depleted of energy by bronchitis, I was reading something and the word 'emptying' stuck in my mind. I skimmed the next few lines then came to: Because we have let everything go, and are preparing to start very new with a very clean slate... This really struck home. Perhaps this cold was an opportunity to stop and look at what else needed to be emptied. In order to fly, one must lighten up, let go of all that no longer serves. If I truly wanted to fly, I had to give up any of those old emotions that kept me feeling separate or inadequate. I could no longer afford to look back at what could have been or should have been. Those thoughts were like chains, keeping me heavy, keeping me down and draining my energy.

The focus I now realized had to be on creating happiness. I now saw that creating happiness was the fuel for flight, and if I could keep my focus on it, I'd be soaring. Of course it wasn't just about creating happiness for me alone, but rather taking on the persona of Sorceress of Happiness and generating it all around. (What a fine image, hahaha!)

With these thoughts in mind, I watched the comedian Dana Carvey do a monologue and in it he talked about 'happy juice', and I thought, wow! that's a perfect way to describe the fuel. I taught Reiki and Chi Kung and tried to explain the Eastern concept of chi, ki or prana but nothing really captured the essence the way happy juice does. Picture walking down the street: those who have a good flow of happy juice are light on their feet and easy to smile, while those whose happy juice channels are blocked are heavy and dour and seem off in some parallel universe. Their souls seem to keep repeating the same old struggles and wrong-doings over and over again like a skipping record. They can't get past the dreaded words or events that victimized them so are before us but not really there – no happy juice, no happiness.

Since the word emptying made its mark in my psyche a few days ago, I keep referring to it when unpleasanties occur. I don't hold onto resentments or anger, with myself or others, I deal with them as quickly as possible so I can get the happy juice flowing again: empty grief, fill up with happy juice. If I am to fly, to be the Sorceress of Happiness, it is essential to forgive and accept. I must remember: "We're all on a path, and each place on that path is honourable."

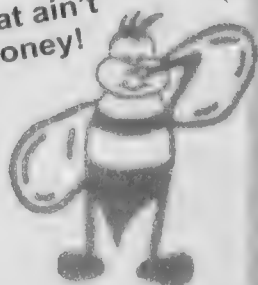

I feel like I'm in sync with the world as I write this because as I sit on the dock on this gorgeous morning, birds of all kinds are coming to greet me. Blue heron swooped around, loon popped up and turkey hawk glided past. What a wonderful feeling. Hey maybe that's why black fly and mosquito keep nibbling at me, they're helping me shift my focus, reminding me to stop looking back and stay present. Create happiness now and the happy juice will flow. So here I am again, exploring life and writing about it. And this makes me happy.

This new title, White Trail, is simple and empty of embellishments. There are no limitations or expectations; there's just a place to start from and return to. No baggage required.

Haliburton Highlands Land Trust AGM

Featured Guest Speaker, Ed Poropat, to Speak On "Biodiversity On the Rail Trail"

The Haliburton Highlands Land Trust will hold its annual general meeting on Saturday morning, June 27, at R.D. Lawrence Place in Minden.

Guest speaker Ed Poropat will talk about "Biodiversity on the Rail Trail," which runs south from Haliburton toward Kinmount.

Admission to the meeting is free and open to the public. The AGM takes place from 10 a.m. to noon.

For more information please call 705 754-2532.

About the Land Trust

The Haliburton Highlands Land Trust is a non-profit, non-governmental registered charity. Its mission is to protect the natural heritage of Haliburton County for future generations.

The Haliburton Highlands Land Trust will work to conserve the plants, wildlife and clean water of Haliburton County to ensure a legacy of forests, fields and wetlands, and the species they nurture.

The Haliburton Highlands Land Trust will do this by: identifying significant lands and waters of natural or cultural value; working cooperatively with individuals, groups and government to identify, manage and/or research areas of interest; acquiring significant properties and/or conservation easements through donation or purchase; encouraging private and government sectors to set aside significant natural areas.

As a result of increasing pressures on vulnerable ecosystems, the Haliburton Highlands Land Trust was formed in 2005 to assist with conservation of these lands.

Summer at Sir Sam's

Grand Opening for Year-Round Activities –

Saturday, June 27 – Saturday, June 28

The winter weather might be long gone, but that doesn't mean you won't find plenty of activity at Sir Sam's Ski Area in Eagle Lake.

This summer, plans are in place to turn the ski hill into a year-round recreational destination that will surely appeal to a variety of outdoor enthusiasts.

Located just 10 minutes north of Haliburton at Eagle Lake, the resort was started by the Bishop Family in 1965 and became the first four season resort in the Haliburton Highlands. After being in operation for 44 years, the place has undergone many improvements, upgrades and additions. If he were alive today, Sir Sam Hughes (Minister of Militia in the First World War) would hardly recognize the property that was once his summer estate.

Ski and snowboard winter clientele will now be able to enjoy the facility in the summer months. These new activities will include mountain bike trails and rentals, Pump Track, scenic chairlift rides to the top of the hill providing one of the most spectacular views in the Highlands, local arts and crafts gallery, pony rides and food service.

Seven kilometres of mountain bike trails provide beginner and advanced riders with some outstanding climbs, descents and technical challenges as you peddle your way up, down and through open fields and hardwood forests once walked on by Sir Sam himself. Cross country and Downhill Mountain bike rentals are available and you can even have your bike transported to the top of the hill. The resort will host an Ontario Cup Downhill Race on August 15th and 16th and a Tuesday night race series starting on June 30th.

Ride the chairlift and feel the exhilaration of being 30-feet in the air while taking in the panoramic views over Eagle and Moose lakes. You can even take your lunch with you and enjoy the scenery from the picnic area at the top of the hill.

If you have experienced Sir Sam's in the winter you can now look forward to participating in these summer activities.

The grand opening for the summer will be held from Saturday, June 27 – Sunday, June 28.

How New CPP Rules Affect You with Susan Lee

The new rules will be phased in from 2011 to 2016 and will affect people who start receiving payments early or delay getting them after age 65. Under the proposed changes, if you retire before 65 your pension will be cut by 7.2% (up from 6%) for each early year of pension. If you delay collecting CPP, you will get more than before up from 6% to 8.4% for every extra year. Also, you will be able to collect CPP before age 65 even if you are still working. Another adjustment will allow people over 65 who are collecting CPP to make further contributions if they want so that their benefits increase. And finally, the number of low earning years that can be removed has gone up to 8 years from 7.

Accessing Locked in RRSP or RIF new rules again.

Do you have a Locked in RRSP or RIF? What is a Locked in RRSP/RIF? When a person leaves their employment and that employer has some type of pension plan, this person often will receive RRSP from that employer when they leave. When a person receives RRSPs this way the funds are usually locked in which means that the owner can't take any funds out until age 55 and they are limited to how much they can take out. For example, a person with a regular RRSP (lets say 20,000.00) can withdraw the whole 20,000.00 if they want (paying any taxes owing) but, a person with 20,000.00 of Locked in RRSP can only take out a limited to a maximum amount every year which they can't start taking until age 55 for most plans. The reason for this is the RRSP are from a pension and are suppose to provide a pension type of income at retirement. Another complicated feature of these funds is not all Locked in RRSPs are the same. There are Provincial Locked in RRSPs with individual rules for each province and Federal Locked in RRSPs with different rules.

A big change in both Locked in Plans this year is the accessibility to the funds.

Ontario Provincial Locked in funds has always been accessible if the owner was in financial distress. Now a person can, when changing the Locked in RRSP to a Locked in RIF, transfer 50% of the balance up from 25% effective January 2010 to a regular RIF allowing unlimited access to the unlocked funds. New LIF owners who have already taken advantage of the 25% unlocking will have an opportunity to unlock an additional 25% in the new year.

The Federal Locked in RRSP/RIF also changed their rules in May 2008. Now, individuals 55 and older can unlock 50% when converting to a Locked in RIF or unlock the whole plan if it is $22,450.00 or less. Amounts unlocked can be transferred to a regular RRSP/RIF where funds can be withdrawn at any time. Note: that this transfer to an open RRSP/RIF must be done within the first 60 days after the plan is set up or the option is lost forever. If you have an existing Locked in RRSP/RIF and you want to take advantage of this new regulation, you will have to transfer your funds from the old plan to a new plan. Funds transferred to a regular RRSP/RIF, lose their creditor protection provided by the locked in products.

Individuals of any age can access up to $22,450.00 annually of their Locked in RRSP/RIF if they are experiencing financial hardship.

1. Medical or disability related expenditures of more than 20% of a person's income in a calendar year can withdraw the total amount of their expenditures up to the maximum of 50% of the YMPE (Yearly Maximum Pensionable Earnings) which in 2008 is $22,450.00.

2. Low income- an individual who expects to earn less than the low income limit of 75% of the YPME (2008 $44,900.00 X 75% = $33,675.00) will be able to withdraw from locked in plans.

Note: that withdrawals based upon both hardships will be permitted but, the maximum withdrawal in any one calendar year will be 50% of YMPE $22,450.00.

Although these changes take effect immediately, financial institutions may need some time to update systems to accommodate the changes. I will provide updates as the kinks get ironed out.

As with anything involving Revenue Canada, it is confusing. My advice around both of these issues is find out how this affects you personally. Sit down with a professional who can run through the options and numbers with you to assist you with making the best decision for your own personal situation.

Lange on the Law

Donald Lange

There are new amendments to the federal Citizenship Act. The Act has been amended largely in response to recent changes to U.S. immigration policy which now requires all travellers to present valid passports on entry to the U.S. Knowing that this change was coming, many Canadian residents, who assumed that they were Canadian citizens, applied for Canadian passports but were denied because they were actually not Canadian citizens.

Among the new amendments, the Act restores Canadian citizenship to those who were forced to renounce their Canadian citizenship when they became citizens of other countries. Dual citizenship was not permitted prior to 1977. It also restores citizenship to those who became citizens when the first Citizenship Act was passed on January 1, 1947 but who subsequently lost it for one reason or another. These include people born in Canada prior to 1947 and war brides, as well as British subjects who lived in Canada for at least five years before 1947. The restoring of citizenship will be retroactive to the date the person lost citizenship.

One of the significant changes is a limitation on who is automatically entitled to citizenship. Previously, the Act permitted Canadians to pass their citizenship on to endless generations of children born outside of Canada. This is no longer the case. Citizenship may now only be passed down to the first generation of children born outside of Canada. One of the parents must have been born in Canada or became a Canadian citizen after immigrating to Canada. However, all children born to a Canadian parent working outside of Canada for the federal or provincial governments or serving with the Canadian Forces will be granted Canadian citizenship regardless of the generation in which they were born outside of Canada.

In the next column, I will be talking about solicitor-client privilege.

Hot Times in Halcyon

By Terrance Seamus O'Gavan

A Hutterite Rockets out of the 19th century

The roads are very straight around Halcyon, Manitoba. Prairie ribbons of macadam run down straight lines seemingly forever. They crisscross every mile. These ribbons from the sky look like a huge checkerboard.

No trees and no topographical nuisances to mar passage or road-building whims. Just endless tracks of open prairie punctuated by ruler straight slices of asphalt.

I started my newspaper career in Halcyon. As the junior reporter I was placed on scanner patrol by our eminent editor-in-chief Lorne Bjornson. Also, I think it had something to do with my drive of choice; a four-barreled, 455 cubic inch Firebird, capable of too-horrendous-to-speculate speeds.

It was exhilarating duty. Nothing better than following an RCMP cruiser to a crime scene or an accident at 170 kilometers-per-hour, down that endless white line road.

One day, in late June 1989, an all-points scrum was pounded through every available emergency outlet. Police, fire and EMT's scrambled. My editor winked and pointed to me.

I passed the RCMP substation in my "Bird" just as two cruisers were pulling out of the lot. Sgt Kevin Hanrahan pointed to me and waved me in behind, sirens and lights already flashing.

We jumped onto Hwy 3 headed north and toward the Lake Manitoba beach districts. I looked down at my needle and was surprised to see it touching 200 kph; and I was barely hanging on to Sgt Hanrahan's 5-liter Mustang pursuit car. I gripped the steering wheel of my Firebird a little tighter and punched the pedal to the floor. It took us 15 minutes to travel the 55 kilometers to Elk Point lookout.

Elk Point is famous for a topographical anomaly. A rugged set of cliffs rings a picturesque and tranquil bay at the southern edges of Lake Manitoba. At Elk Point junction another oddity. A sudden 90-degree bending curve on Highway 3, a turn that swings east from Elk Point Bay and those stunning cliffs.

Three vehicles from the local Elk Point fire and rescue were already on scene.

I recognized Elk Point fire chief Ragnar Gislason immediately. He was standing on the gravel shoulder shaking his head. Sgt Hanrahan and I rushed over to Chief Gislason who pointed upward to the cliffs.

What we saw begged explanation.

About 150 feet up, still seeping and billowing smoke was wreckage totally embedded in the side of the Elk Point cliffside.

The metal debris resembled the site of an airplane crash. Two eyewitnesses who were sunbathing below the cliffs said it wasn't a plane. One of them, Halcyon high school quarterback, Chucky Gunnarson, said he was sure he saw the vague outline of a late model F-150 Ford pickup. "I swear to god, it looked like Jon Waldman's canary yellow F-150," said Gunnarson.

I knew Jonathan Livingstone Waldman, a 23-year-old agricultural engineer at The Halcyon Hutterite Colony. He was a rebel. He dressed like James Dean, drank beer and played guitar for a local band called "The Low Down Libertarians."

JLW had always loved technology, and found Hutterite life a little too macabre and backward for his liking. I liked Jon. We shared a love of music.

Sgt Hanrahan, Chief Gislason, two paramedics and I made the long and harrowing trudge up the Elk Point cliffs. It resembled an aircraft crash site.

The good chemists and doctors in the RCMP's Winnipeg Forensic laboratory later confirmed that it was Jonathan Waldman's F-150 Ford pickup, and pieced together the events that led up to its unexpected demise.

It seems that Jonathan Livingstone Waldman had somehow got hold of a JATO (Jet Assisted Take-Off) unit. JATO units are solid fuel rockets used to give heavy military transport airplanes an extra push for take-off from short airfields.

He attached the JATO unit to the bed of his canary yellow F-150 pickup, jumped in, accelerated to a high speed, and fired off the rocket.

The facts?

Jon Livingstone Waldman ignited the JATO unit approximately 2.5 miles from the crash site. This was established by the location of a prominently scorched and melted strip of asphalt. The vehicle quickly reached a speed of between 250 and 300 mph and continued at that speed, under full power, for an additional 20-25 seconds. At that point of his very short journey, Jonathan Livingstone Waldman experienced G-forces usually reserved for top gun naval pilots in F-16s wheedling downhill under full afterburners.

The F-150 remained on Hwy 3 for approximately 2.4 miles (20-22 seconds) before Jonathan applied the brakes.

With expected results. The brakes melted completely; and then the tires blew.

This left the inevitable thick black rubber marks on the road surface.

The canary yellow Ford then became airborne for an additional 1.3 miles, impacted the cliff face at a height of 125 feet, and left a blackened crater 5 feet deep in the rock.

No driver's remains were recovered.

Ironically a still-legible bumper sticker was found. "How do you like my driving? Dial 1-800-EAT-SHIT!"

A small rider to this story. The Hutterites are German sects who, like the Amish, eschew western culture. They run communal farms, and have their own schools and fire departments. Unlike the Amish they embrace modern farming technology. Big tractors, big machinery. They send their brightest to agricultural college.

Young men like Jonathan Livingstone Waldman sometimes seek to escape the stringent ties. Jon, who I spoke to often, was one of the rebels, with a cause. He was savvy, canny and quite astute, but he was the son of a church elder. Leaving the Halcyon Hutterite commune was not an option.

About a year after the crash, I was at the Winnipeg Folk festival. I caught a reggae band, late on Thursday night. They were wailing soul, ganja, Jimmy Cliff and Bob Marley, on one of the side stages. Under the stars I caught a searing glint of steely blue eyes, under a full regalia of blonde dreadlocks.

After the set I pushed through the crowd and the smoke. "Jon," I said, noting the smile. "How did you do it?"

The familiar smile danced back under those blonde dreads.

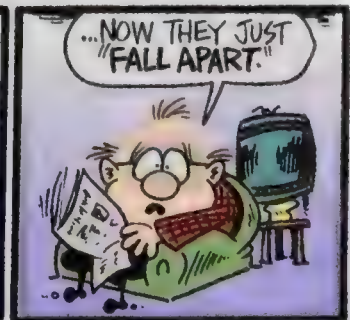

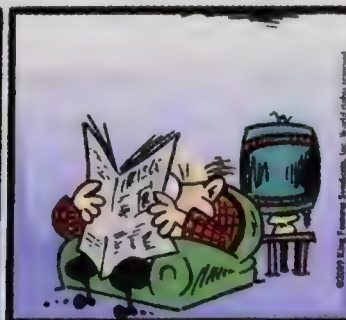

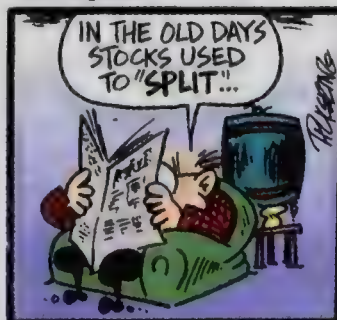

"Hey mon! My favorite Irish Iclander, Terrannnnccce ... Hush now, mon ... don't spoil de secret ... and it's Jonathan Livingstone Seagull mon! Cumbaya my brother. Haille Selassie lives!"

He hugged me, winked, and then danced away into the night, singing: "Oh, please dontcha' rocka' ma' boat ... Cos' I don' want ma' boat to be rockin'."

About 20 yards down the moonlit path Jonathan Livingstone Seagull glanced over his shoulder and yelled:

"Hey mon ... don' be lookin' so glum ... it's called an ejection seat!"

THE PIPE LINE

by Mark Evans

Use Low Phosphate Soap

Well the dryer ate one of my socks again so I've decided to hang my clothes on the line from now on. The weather looks agreeable but the birds look a little too excited to see the new targets. I swear one of those feathered assassins looks like Tackleberry from the movie "Police Academy". I'll find out later if this was a better idea than mismatched socks.

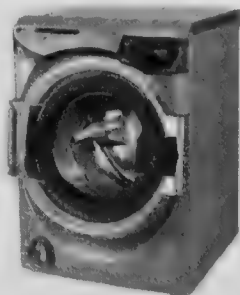

I use low phosphate soap because it's better for the septic system, cold water to lower my hydro consumption and now I'm even using the clothes line to reduce my environmental impact. The entire laundry method can be tailored to be in synch with Mother Nature. Sounds great right? It's not so simple. Just ask my neighbour Clem.

Little did I realise he was one bird plop away from going over the edge. I've tried to explain that shooting the birds because they forced him to re-wash his clothes wasn't really helping save the environment. Good thing he's got that twitchy eye, he hasn't hit one yet.

Drawing water from the lake or the well often causes the supply lines to the washing machine to become blocked. It's a good idea to undo the lines occasionally and clean the screens out because sediment tends to build up soon after seasonal start-up.

Doing laundry in cottage country often requires a more involved mechanical system than in the city. I've seen places that require four pumping operations to wash a load. 1-Pump from the lake or well to wash machine, 2-from washer to inside sewage tank, 3-from inside tank to outside tank, 4-from outside tank to septic system. That's using a lot of power to have the luxury of clean clothes while on vacation. Perhaps nudity is an environmentally friendly option you could explore. Send photo's for a free consultation or just drop by but call first, it could be wash day for Clem.

Stress Busters

Quick Tips To Lower That Stress Level

Exercise Caution

Avoid exercising prior to having breakfast in the morning. First, you won't have the energy to exercise as long or as strenuously as you can later in the day. Second, on an empty stomach your body will break down muscle in order to use protein for fuel. So the bottom line is that you'll feel more stress while burning fewer calories, and if you do this regularly, you may lose muscle, which leads to a decrease in your metabolism.

Turning Up the Heat

Music, Dance and Art Collide at the Spectrum Arts Healing Centre

The summer is near and the heat is rising. The Spectrum Healing Art Center (SHAC) would like to help spice things up even more with two upcoming events. On Friday, June 19, come and enjoy a labyrinth walk with Bailey Renshaw and then let yourself be guided by the serene sound of Anita's crystal bowls.

Then on the following Friday (June 26) the Friday Night Dance Sessions carries on with a special fire and drumming touch. Bring your percussion toys for a delightful hour around the fire before taking it to the dance floor after dark.

Both events start at 8 p.m.

The SHAC is located in Minden at 1127 Bobcaygeon Rd. For more information call Paul at 705 286-3372 or Sebastian at 705 286-6496.

"On a pegboard wall in the garage or shop, outline your tools with chalk while they are hanging on the wall. You will know right away how they are supposed to be hung up, and you can wipe the chalk right off if you want to rearrange your tools." -- T.G. in New York

"Got new trees? Protect the trunks of young trees with a piece of old garden hose. Cut a length to fit the bottom part of the trunk, split it up the side and snap it on the trunk." -- E.D. in Alabama

Line a mini muffin tin with paper liners. Squirt a half-ounce or so of lotion into each one and freeze. When frozen, they can be popped into a small box or bag and stored in the freezer. They are great for soothing sunburned or chapped skin. They also feel wonderful on the feet after a long day.
